Incheon is one of Korea's major port cities and a gateway to the metropolitan area of Korea. Through the world-renowned Incheon International Airport and Incheon Port, which make up a logistics hub of Northeast Asia, the city also provides easy access to many parts of the world. More than 50 large cities with a 1 million+ population are within a 3-hour flight from Incheon.

Home to United Nations (UN) offices and organizations, including the Green Climate Fund, Incheon is often called "the city of the UN." It ranked first in terms of ease of doing business (reported by the Mael Business Newspaper, based on the Mayors and Governors Survey 2013), foreign direct investment attraction (reported by Munhwa Ilbo, based on data from the Ministry of Trade, Industry & Energy, Q1, 2013) and job creation (based on the Senior Job Creation Survey 2013, from the Ministry of Health and Welfare) in the first quarter of 2013.

As of the end of October, 2014, the city of Incheon has attracted 115 investment cases worth USD 1.801 billion. This was due in part to the abundant supply of talent from metropolitan areas. Also, Incheon's cluster project has concentrated companies from the IT, bio and other industries into industrial complexes in the area. Excellent land, marine and air transportation networks in the city facilitate the convenient supply of raw materials and cheap logistics costs, contributing significantly to foreign investment attraction.

Incheon's eight strategic industries include aviation, auto parts, robot, bio, tourism, cosmetics, service (logistics, medical, education) and marina. The city will launch a future development plan, Vision 2050, for projects to promote each industry.

Incheon has three foreign investment attraction zones: the Songdo-Cheongna-Yeongjong area, a specially designated free economic zone; an old downtown area; and an island area that includes Ganghwa and Ongjin islands.

One event expected to promote investment in the area is Cityscape Korea, to be held in June. Organized by the Korea Economic Daily Media Group and Incheon City, the event is poised to be the premier international real estate investment and development event for the East Asian region, connecting real estate investors and professionals from countries including Japan, Hong Kong, Taiwan, China and, of course, Korea. Cityscape Korea is also the latest addition to Cityscape’s continuously growing portfolio of real estate exhibitions and conferences.

“It is my honor to welcome Cityscape to Incheon, the financial, logistics and business hub of Northeast Asia. Incheon is a dynamic and enjoyable city where you can find numerous business opportunities. Cityscape Korea will develop all of our participants’ business potential while enjoying our beautiful city,” said Jeongbok Yoo, Mayor of Incheon Metropolitan City.

The event will incorporate a large-scale exhibition showcasing the latest real estate developments and services, as well as the East Asia Real Estate Summit, a meeting point for key investors and senior-level stakeholders to discuss new regulations, latest project concepts, investment trends and much more.
